V. RESEARCH AND WRITING ACTIVITIES

A. Current Writing Projects

I have completed one new book that is awaiting publication. Civic Health: Political Theory and Ethics in Public Health. A study that develops a political theory for public health policy and practice drawing on civic republicanism, communitarian ethics, and discursive democracy. Currently under review at the University of North Carolina Press.

I have two finished manuscripts soon to be submitted to publishers. (1) Thinking through Nature: Symbiotic Being, Politics, and Time. Explores a symbiotic, interdependent perspective on ontology, ecological democratic citizenship and politics, and intergenerational relationships among past, present, and future against the backdrop of climate change. Articulates a moral and political imagination that can reconcile human creativity with ecological solidarity and care. (2) Creature and Creator: An Essay on Moral Limits in the Age of Biopower. A study of ethical limits in the use of biotechnology and the human fabrication of life.

I am in the course of composing one addition book for future publication. The Ordeal of Solidarity: On the Growth of Moral Awareness and Mutuality in the Face of Injustice. A study of the philosophical underpinnings of social solidarity and efforts to achieve just recognition of others and just relationships with them.

Other ongoing writing projects include: Dementia and the Human Good—a study of personhood and agency in the context of dementing illness and the ethical goals of dementia care; Interpretive Policy Studies: Essays in Ethics, Social Science, and Policy Analysis—a collection of essays on hermeneutics and interpretive social science to issues of policy analysis and applied and professional ethics; and two edited collections of articles by multiple authors on Ecological Political Economy: Conceptual Foundations and Values, and The Ethics of Care and Place.

B. Funded Research Projects
