

The Vanderbilt Prize in Biomedical Science 2022 Nomination Form

Applications due: December 1, 2021

Purpose:

The Vanderbilt Prize in Biomedical Science honors and recognizes a woman scientist of national reputation who has a stellar record of research accomplishments and is known for her mentorship of other women in science. In addition to a $25,000 cash award for the recipient, the Vanderbilt Prize nurtures the career, research, and studies of a promising woman during her PhD studies at Vanderbilt. The winner will give a lecture at Vanderbilt during the Fall 2022 semester, serve as a mentor to the selected female PhD student, and sit on the Vanderbilt Prize review committee for the following year.

Eligibility:

Nominees for the Vanderbilt Prize must be women scientists in any area of basic or clinical research or clinical practice. The nominee must have a national reputation, a stellar record of research accomplishments, and must be an active mentor of other women in science. We encourage nominators to consider women of underrepresented populations when selecting a nominee.

Nomination Process:

There is no limit to the number of qualified women scientists an institution may nominate. The attached pages must be completed and received via email by December 1, 2021 to Andrea Davis at andrea.davis@vumc.org. In addition to the attached pages, please include the following (as one .pdf) in the order listed below:

- A letter of nomination from the nominee's department chair or dean
- One letter of recommendation from a distinguished peer in basic or clinical research or in clinical practice
- Nominee's complete CV

If you have any questions, please contact Andrea Davis at andrea.davis@vumc.org.

Thank you for your support of the Vanderbilt Prize in Biomedical Science.
