TEACHING AND MENTORING

Dade County Public Schools (Coral Gables Senior High), Spanish and English for Speakers of Other Languages (secondary education), 1986-1988

University of Miami, College of Arts and Sciences, Department of Psychology, Biobehavioral Statistics, 1992

Overview: From 1995 through the present, my primary mode of clinical and research teaching has been through direct clinical supervision, clinical research mentorship, training and supervising health coaches.

As of Jan 1, 2020, I have clinically trained, directly supervised and/or mentored:

- 6 graduate students of psychology
- 10 master's level psychotherapists (4 LCSWs, 1 LPA, 4 LPCs, 1 LMFT)
- 27 health coaches (most with master's degrees, 9 with doctorates)
- 108 health coach trainees (most with master's degrees, 9 with doctorates)
- 247 medical students in communication and coaching skills
- 4 pre-doctoral interns
- 8 postdoctoral fellows
- 12 health psychologists

As of Jan 1, 2020, I have directly trained and/or mentored clinical research for:

- 2 high school students
- 7 undergraduates
- 8 post-baccalaureates applying for graduate or medical school (all 8 successfully admitted)
- 4 masters students
- 5 post-masters' students (2 preparing for graduate or medical school, also successful)

- 4 medical students (two of whom spent 2 years with me, full-time)
- 9 doctoral students (from 8 Universities)
- 3 medical residents (psychiatry & medicine)
- 9 postdoctoral fellows

As of Jan 1, 2020, I have directly mentored 21 junior faculty in the submission of grants and peer-reviewed publications; 8 of these are junior faculty at Vanderbilt University or VUMC.

Philosophy: Whether I am training individuals in clinical work or in clinical research, I generally adhere to the following tenets: 1) use coaching methodology to solicit and reinforce learners' own observations of their process (how do they best learn); 2) demonstrate how to find and evaluate current scientific information regarding the issue at hand; 3) encourage exploration of personal areas of interest that also contribute to the goals of team projects; 4) point out alternative perspectives (e.g., when they may be limited by personal history or cognitive style); 5) create an environment which is both fun and has a solid foundation of trust so that individuals can notice their own process and align their activities and interests with strengths and natural propensities (this is also how I build teams); and 6) establish group norms for high performance and positive feedback so that individuals help each other and create a mutually satisfying learning community.

CLINICAL ACTIVITY

10% Time dedicated to direct provision of health coaching and supervision. National reputation as a health psychologist as evidenced by long-term clients while at Duke from Texas, Massachusetts, Illinois, New York, Pennsylvania, and California until I moved to Vanderbilt and paused my therapy practice. Health coaching clients now from North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Italy.

AREAS OF RESEARCH INTEREST

- Use of mind-body techniques and health coaching to enhance communication and implement sustainable behavior change
- Mindfulness-based approaches to regulate eating, manage weight and change health behavior
- Use of group approaches to modify behavior and interpersonal experience

1. Wolever, R.Q. (2015). Duke Executive Health Psychosocial Evaluation Template. A thorough update to the psychosocial evaluation system originally developed for Duke Executive Health Program in 1999. The original system assessed patients on psychosocial risk factors for cardiovascular disease and early all-cause mortality and included assessment of perceived stress, hostility, depression and social isolation. While the basic instruments are still sound, Duke Executive Health wanted the report templates and evidence-based scoring algorithms to be updated per the last 15 years of data, to shift one of the instruments to a shorter assessment measure if possible, and to change the depression inventory to a measure in the public domain. With the help of doctoral student Pam Buck, updated literature searches were compiled. With review and input from the Executive Health team, I updated the report templates as well as created an exploratory template to be used for anxiety.

2. Quillian, R.E. & Wolever, M.E. (1999). Duke Stress Management Battery. Psychosocial evaluation system developed for Duke Executive Health Program to assess patients on cardiovascular psychosocial risk factors and early all-cause mortality risk factors, including perceived stress, hostility, depression and social isolation. Duke Executive Health continued to use the report templates and evidence-based scoring algorithms to assess patients and generate revenue until a new system was developed in 2015 to replace it. Per Kevin Waters (personal communication, April 2013), the battery and template reports were used with about 2000 patients.

14. Meharry-Vanderbilt Health Coaching Certificate Program Licensure Agreement (June 2018 – June 2023) – After completing the commercialization process for curriculum in the Vanderbilt Health Coaching Certificate Program (“VHCCP”), a 5 year licensure agreement was granted to Meharry Medical College (MMC) for the non-exclusive right to utilize many aspects of the curriculum within established guidelines that allow the program to be eligible for accreditation through the Program Approval Commission of the International Consortium of Health and Wellness Coaching. The commercialization process acquired copyrights for certain creative works, documentation and written materials related to the VHCCP which was developed by Blaire Morriss, Linda Manning, Colin Armstrong, Ruth Q. Wolever and others within the scope of their employment at Vanderbilt. The materials were then packaged to meet the curriculum needs of MMC and create the Meharry-Vanderbilt Health Coaching Certificate Program (MVHCCP).
15. Meharry-Vanderbilt Health Coaching Certificate Program Professional Services Agreement (June 2018 – June 2023) – The Professional Services Agreement (PSA) provides adequately trained faculty to deliver the MVHCCP for the first year, and up to four subsequent years, depending on the delivery needs of MMC. Renewed for Year 2 (2019), Year 3 (2020), and Year 4 (2021).
